HISTORY

Did you know that we sit on the site of what was once Clarendon House?

This was once London's grandest palatial residence built for Edward Hyde, 1st Earl of Clarendon; the final owner of that property was Christopher Monck, 2nd Duke of Albemarle. Monck sold the estate for the princely sum of £26,000 to Thomas Bond Esq, who went on to create Bond Street and later, Albemarle and Dover Street. When we came across Christopher Monck, we loved his spirit; a Mayfair gent, Lord and dandy. He was a treasure hunter a military leader and an innovator. He left his mark on the neighbourhood and like him, we hope to do the same.

When you are sitting at the bar, take a moment to look through our cocktail menu as we have reimagined a number of the tipples that we think Monck would enjoy if he was still sitting around the fireplace at Clarendon House. We hope you enjoy them too!
